

Mahoosic Notch is a narrow gap in the mountains of western Maine where boulders are stacked on top of each other creating a complex maze along the Appalachian trail. We hiked it in July and found an icy spring spurting from a #rock with the purest water I've every tasted.

